Lloyd Metzger Receives International Dairy Foods Association Teaching Award in Dairy Manufacturing

Champaign, IL—The American Dairy Science Association® (ADSA®) is pleased to announce Lloyd Metzger as the 2019 recipient of the International Dairy Foods Association Teaching Award in Dairy Manufacturing. The award will be presented on Monday, June 24, 2019, during the awards ceremony at the ADSA Annual Meeting in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The International Dairy Foods Association Teaching Award in Dairy Manufacturing was created to recognize outstanding teaching of undergraduate students in dairy foods. The winner must have demonstrated outstanding ability as a teacher of undergraduate students of dairy foods in an accredited college or university and be an active teacher when nominated with not less than a total of 10 years of active teaching preceding. The winner must also be and have been a member of ADSA for at least five successive years.

Lloyd Metzger is a professor and the Alfred Chair in Dairy Education at South Dakota State University. He is also the director of the Midwest Dairy Foods Research Center and serves as executive secretary of the North Central Cheese Industry Association. Metzger obtained his bachelor and master of science degrees in dairy manufacturing from South Dakota State University and his doctorate in food science from Cornell University. Prior to joining South Dakota State University, he was employed as a research scientist at General Mills and as an assistant and associate professor in the Food Science and Nutrition department at the University of Minnesota–St. Paul. He has more than 20 years of teaching experience and specializes in cheese and dairy ingredient manufacture.

It is with great pleasure that ADSA and the International Dairy Foods Association present Lloyd Metzger with the 2019 International Dairy Foods Association Teaching Award in Dairy Manufacturing.
